HELPS TO STUDY.

Mk. 10:37 is a request which shows both that the disciples still looked for a political kingdom, and that these two at least still cherished a selfish ambition to outrank their fellow-apostles, the first an intellectual error, the second a grave moral fault. V. 38, both cup and baptism are figurative expressions for the painful experiences of toil and sorrow and humiliation through which Jesus foresaw that he must pass. V. 39 is illustrated by Acts 12:1, 2. V. 42, "they which are accounted to rule" officials, governors; "Lord it over them," exercise arbitrary authority, ruling for their own advantage, not for the benefit of the ruled. (See Jno. 19:8.) "And to give his life," not simply to lay it down in death, but to devote it to the service of mankind.

Jericho is in the Jordan valley, five miles west of the river and about five miles north of the Dead Sea. Its altitude is nearly 500 feet higher than the Dead Sea. Zaccheus, a chief publican, that is, one who had bought the right to collect the customs in the district about Jericho. Strictly speaking, he was not an official, but a contractor. He doubtless sold out to others the right to collect the customs at certain points or on certain articles of commerce. This was what was called farming the taxes. The sycamore tree was the fig-mulberry, a tree often growing by the wayside in Palestine. Its trunk is short, and its branches spread widely. It was the helpful, fraternal spirit of Jesus that won Zaccheus. His restitution shows that his repentance was sincere. On restoring goods taken by fraud, see Ex. 22:1, 4, 7, 8; Lev. 19:11.

The teaching of the parable of the ten pounds is that of faithfulness with its accompanying reward, as over against disloyalty with its resulting punishment. "A certain nobleman," was possibly a reference to Archelaus and his journey to Rome to obtain his kingdom. Notice that the reward is proportionate to the apparent ability of the servants.

THE BIBLE.

Its Genuineness.—By the genuineness of the Scriptures is meant that they were written by the persons whose signature they bear; their genuineness is strengthened when it is shown that they were written at the times, in the places and under the circumstances usually claimed. The evidence of this is yearly increasing, and is already more satisfactory than that which can be brought in support of any other body of existing literature.

The subject-matter and style, the language and dialects, the undersigned coincidences of the Scriptures, constitute the internal evidence of their genuineness. Their contemporaneous acknowledgment by believers, heretics, and heathen, together with early versions in the Syriac, Latin, Ethiopic and Coptic, constitute the external evidence.

THE TEACHER.

Rules for Teaching.—There are Ten Rules for teaching and Five Principles of teaching that will be presented for consideration. We give the rules first.

1. Never try to teach what you do not quite understand. Reasons:
  - (a) Accurate knowledge is necessary to clear teaching.
  - (b) Scholars soon detect and despise a teacher's ignorance of a lesson; thus all influence over the class is lost.
  - (c) Unless we understand the lesson we are in danger of "handling the word of God deceitfully" (2 Cor. 4:2), and thus giving it a wrong meaning and application.
2. Never tell a child what you can make that child tell you. Reason:
  - (a) This rule is in accord with the fundamental principle of all teaching—"The mind is not a vessel to be filled, but an organism to be developed."
  - (b) It injures the mind to try to pour in knowledge without receptivity; it benefits the mind to draw out from it the knowledge which it has.
  - (c) It stimulates and benefits any one to tell what that one knows, and increases their interest and attention.
  - (d) Pupils will remember things better when they have expressed them publicly.
  - (e) By getting pupils to tell what they know you induce an activity of mind which will readily grasp new knowledge imparted by you.
3. Never give a piece of information without asking for it again. Reasons:
  - (a) It will quicken the attention of the class to know that they will be asked to give again what they learn.
  - (b) By repeating it he becomes master of it and it is fixed more permanently in his memory.
  - (c) By hearing one give again in his own words what you have taught, you can detect any error and correct it, and supplement any deficiency of knowledge.

SEARCH QUESTIONS.

1. What two errors betray themselves in the request of James and John (Mk. 10:36)? 2. Explain Jesus' reply to them. 3. What principle respecting primary among his disciples does he teach them in vs. 42-44? 4. Indicate applications of this principle to various phases of modern life. 5. Explain the words of Jesus in Mk. 10:45 and indicate their relation to his own life and to the lives of his disciples. 6. Give an account of the conversion of Zaccheus. 7. What was the best evidence of the reality of his conversion? 8. May the same evidence be demanded today? 9. Tell the parable of the pounds. 10. What is its central teaching? 11. What was the chief offense of the servant who brought back to his master nothing but the original pound.

In the Tomb of Ioua and Tiova

A RICH find was made in the land of the pharaohs recently which throws light on the customs of the Egyptians of a very early period and reveals the fact that the people of that ancient era possessed many things strangely resembling those of modern times. In the course of the excavations in the sacred valley of the kings a tomb was found which proved to have a curious history. From the hieroglyphics on the mummy cases the archaeologists made out that the burial place was that of "Ioua, hereditary prince, chief friend among the friends of the sovereign." Near his mummy was that of his wife, Tiova. The tomb was in a state of much confusion. Mummy cases were broken open, coffin covers were left standing against the wall and the apartment was filled with vases, furniture and adornments scattered about in a haphazard way. It was the tomb of the father and mother of Tili, a queen of the eighteenth dynasty, about 1700 B. C., whose changing of the national religion caused uproar and violence in those faraway days. It is conjectured that she wished for her father and mother a royal burial, but as the times were not auspicious placed their mummies in this tomb temporarily, with the funeral offerings, until the desired honors could be duly paid.

Evidently the period of quiet did not arrive, and the mummies were left where they were placed. Perhaps a thousand years passed away, and then the tomb was entered by a robber, who stole jewelry and other things which seemed to him of value. He scattered many things about in his wanton disregard of the sacredness of the place, but nevertheless left the tomb in possession of the very articles most valuable to present day students of that distant time. It was not opened again until the archaeologists removed the debris from it a few weeks ago, and thus but for a single rude intrusion it has lain undisturbed for almost 4,000 years.

Owing to the custom of those early days of placing in the tombs of the rich and great the things they were supposed to need in the other world, or the symbols of the same, including even officials of servants to minister to them, this burial place was filled with many articles which because of their antiquity and the knowledge they supply to the life of that time are now of intense interest. Not only vases containing food, but furniture, a chair, a bed and chairs, an embroidery stand and a jewelry box and similar articles, were put in the rock hewn resting place of Ioua and Tiova by Queen Tili. As the contents of the tomb represented in part the furniture or other belongings of a princely household, they were typical of the best workmanship of the period. In design and decoration there is an astonishing similarity between the chairs found in this tomb and those of the French empire and Louis XVI. style now so much affected.

The Egyptians were adepts in the sculpture of animals. Many of the gods and goddesses were represented with human bodies, but with heads of the animals sacred to them, and thus the sculptors became especially proficient in modelling such forms. One of the chairs of this tomb, which looks almost as if it might have been made in the time of Louis XVI., has gaudies under the arms of each side which in their execution are remarkably realistic. The back contains sculptured figures of the god Bes standing between two figures of the goddess Taure, who is represented with the head of an animal. The chair is supported by claw footed legs, which thus are seen to be foated by several thousand years the similar characteristics of so-called antique furniture now popular.

A chair which might be said to be in the empire style has legs modeled on those of the ox. The carved work is gilded with Nubian gold, and the back is sculptured with a scene representing Queen Tili's daughter Set-Ammon on a throne. One chair had a cushion stuffed with goose feathers, perhaps a thoughtful provision by Queen Tili for the comfort of her mother in the other world. Evidently this princely pair were fond of sweets, for among the beautiful alabaster jars containing funeral offerings of food was found a pitcher filled with honey, still in a fluid state, to which the wasps came buzzing when it was brought into the open air. The mummies of Ioua and Tiova were excellently preserved, and the features could readily be distinguished. All the relics are to be preserved at Cairo.

The House Fly.

The musca domestic, or common house fly says Mary Hinman Able in her article on "Flies and Food," in the Delineator for July, is known to convey cholera in the East, and it is under suspicion as to other diseases.

Its origin and habits are such as to put us on our guard. It lays its eggs in excrement, preferring horse manure, but if that does not offer it readily uses any other. It feeds on the same and on the sputum of diseased throats and lungs, on refuse of any kind, and it bears on its hairy feet and legs particles of these substances.

Unlike the mosquito, the house fly is not a biter, but it has its own way of carrying contagion. It deposits, wherever it goes disease, and disease germs may abound in its breeding and feeding places. On the joint of meat exposed for sale by the butcher on the bread and sweetmeats of the confectioner's counter, on the edge of the milk pail, on the kitchen and dining room tables they have been found.

The epidemic of typhoid fever in Chicago in 1902 was caused by the fly. It was especially severe in the nineteenth ward, which furnished one-seventh of the deaths while containing but one thirty-sixth of the city's population. This locality did not differ from the rest of the city, in its water or food supply but it did differ in having more than fifty per cent. of its houses without sanitary plumbing, the water being insufficient. Flies caught in undrained closets, on the fences, and the room of a patient were proved to carry the germ.

Situations Guaranteed.

We do not guarantee situations to prospective students in order to get their patronage. Schools of merit do not resort to such dishonest practices.
Fake schools "guarantee" situations in order to secure students, because they have no other inducements to offer.
Our work is so thorough that a guarantee is superfluous. Business men are so eager to get competent help here that a large per cent. of our students take positions before they graduate.
See us before making arrangements for your business and shorthand education at some inferior, fake school. We will take pleasure in telling you all about the loopholes in the "position guarantees" of dishonest schools. Catalogue free.

Killing at Sturgis

Between nine and ten o'clock Saturday night, Tom Simpson, colored, was shot and killed by parties unknown. The killing occurred near the I. C. depot. The dead man was a quiet and respected member of his race and the citizens of the town are free in their denunciation of the outrage. Simpson was walking along in company with a colored woman when he was shot in the back. He lived long enough to state that there were about a dozen white men in the party but the negro was unable to recognize any of them. The woman corroborated his statement exactly.

A $1,000 reward has been offered for the arrest of the guilty party or parties. The coal company offered $750 of the reward and the district of United Mine Workers offered the other $250. A reward of $150 has also been offered by the governor.

Mr. O. G. Wilson, of St. Louis has arrived with machinery for drilling and work will commence soon above the Kuttawa Mineral Springs sinking oil and gas wells. He is prepared to go to a depth of twenty five hundred feet into the bowels of the earth. The Hillman Land and Iron Company is back of the enterprise and there is no doubt that a long continued effort will be made to find oil or natural gas. Plenty of encouraging prospects have been made of which exist at several points on the company's land.—Lyon County Times.
